

Swiss Express Editor

As many members know after over 12-years in the role Malcolm Bulpitt is intending to stand down as the editor of Swiss Express at the forthcoming AGM in April. It is an important role that, although potentially quite time-consuming, is quite fulfilling. If you have a passing interest in journalism, or graphic design, as well as some knowledge of the Swiss transportation system, and Switzerland itself, why not contact the Secretary to discuss the role. The Management Team of the Society are looking for enthusiasm rather than expertise so if you think that you could help to keep up the high standard of the publication why not make contact. We can provide resources and Mentors to support the role. Our Photo Editor Tony Bagwell (a non-elected position) is also standing down at this time so if you also have an interest in photography you may wish to combine the positions. The need to potentially revise the current way the magazine is prepared and published is also up for discussion with potential candidates. It is essential that Swiss Express should continue in its current role with its comprehensive overview of all forms of transport in Switzerland as for many members it is their only real link with the Society. Please give this role some thought, as you may be the ideal person to carry forward the success of our flagship publication.
